These figures included 6 students of Māori descent enrolled.

These figures included 6 students of Māori descent enrolled. In terms of the actual nature of enrolment, the Southern Health School reported that the 2023 school year the school enrolled a total of 708 unique students. Their lowest weekly enrolment was 212 unique students, which occurred during the first week of the school year. Their highest weekly enrolment was 394 unique students, which occurred during week 37 (with there being 40 weeks in the school year). The average length of time a student was enrolled in the Southern Health School was 29 weeks. The Southern Health School indicated that 654 of those 708 unique students were dual enrolled in their home school. That home school was a brick-and-mortar school for 647 students, but the home school was listed as Te Kura for 7 students (i.e., 7 students were full-time distance learning students). Additionally, there were 384 students enrolled in Te Kura on a supplemental basis (i.e., enrolled in one or more courses, but not on a full-time basis). Finally, there were 54 unique students who were not dual enrolled in their home school, but who were directly enrolled in the Southern Health School.
